INTERNAL POLICY OF BUREAU

The Bureau has received a number of requests regarding the nature and availability of reports, the nature and availability of reports, and their relationship to the Bureau's formal publications. The following information of this series has been prepared for the Bureau's use.

The reports are used mainly as the means of communicating to the sponsor the results of investigations on various subjects. They often contain preliminary, tentative, or preliminary or complete, a majority of these reports are prepared for submission to the sponsoring agencies and their use is limited to those agencies. For these reasons the reports are subject to control by the sponsor, and any distribution they receive must be controlled by the sponsor. There is no general distribution and no published listing of these reports.

In accordance with this policy the reports should not be referred to in whole or part, nor should they be referred to in the literature. Permission is obtained in writing from the Office of Technical Services, National Bureau of Standards. The sponsor is responsible for securing permission of sponsors when required.

Articles of permanent scientific value appearing in the reports are reprinted in the journals and made available in the literature. The publications include two periodicals (Journal of Research and Technical Bulletin) and seven nonperiodicals (Annual Report, Progress Report, etc.). The Department of Documents, U. S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D. C. 20402.

The Federal Information Bulletin affords the best means of locating reports of the Bureau. In addition to concise summary abstracts of reports, this monthly periodical lists all papers by the Bureau, reports, technical publications and outside journals.
